

The MARKETS NOW

Informal and interactive discussions of global markets inviting questions, asking questions and exchanging views with investors who share the same fascination and enthusiasm for financial markets.

- Which stock markets will outperform as the Fed considers its first rate hike?
- Are risks increasing as the global economy slowly recovers?
- Since the sequencing of the human genome in 2000, close to US$500bn has been invested in biotech companies worldwide – this capital investment is funding R&D activity, which is powering a revolution in medical innovation
- This new innovation and product cycle is transforming the biotech sector, driving strong growth, and in recent years we've seen the "release" of pent-up value
- How does the informed private investor play the Age of Technology?
