The MARKETS NOW

Informal and interactive discussions of global markets inviting questions, asking questions and exchanging views with investors who share the same fascination and enthusiasm for financial markets.

- Is this year's small recovery in commodity prices sustainable?
- Which futures-traded precious metals have the most upside potential?
- Are global stock market risks increasing or decreasing?
- The flood of news and investment advice can take a lot of our time. Personally I want to use methods requiring at most monthly attention.
- Harry Browne's simple 'set and forget' Permanent Portfolio requires attention only once a year. For the US market, it provides returns similar to the market but with much less volatility only 4 small losses in 3 decades.
- It is less known and used in the UK yet gives good results. And it may be possible to devise smarter versions with even higher returns. Income returns in an income free world.
- Post Brexit Referendum, is there still hope for the UK?
- Lies, tricks and misconceptions in the asset management industry (part 1 of 100)
